

SVEND ERIK LARSEN

Do Global Memories Exist?

Hannah Arendt claims that a globalized culture is a culture deprived of memories, whereas postcolonial authors like Edouard Glissant and Derek Wallcot hold that in that context memories are even more important, but also that to grasp this importance our notion of memories and their function will have to be changed.